FAST GROWING ROLE | PATIENT CENTERED CARE

ADULT-GERONTOLOGY PRIMARY CARE NURSE PRACTITIONER

ADVANCED CARE FOR AGING ADULTS

Our Adult-Gerontology Primary Care Nurse Practitioner (AGPCNP) track within the DNP program prepares you to provide comprehensive, person-centered primary care for adults and older adults, with a focus on health promotion, wellness and the diagnosis and management of stable acute and chronic conditions.

The AGPCNP focuses on optimizing health by engaging patients in decisions that support the intersection of physical, behavioral, and social wellness. With expertise in health promotion, disease prevention, episodic illness treatment, and chronic disease management, you'll be ready to guide patients through every stage of health.

Your Scope Expands

As an AGPCNP, you will:

- Promoting physical and psychosocial health.
- Preventing disease and supporting long-term wellness.
- Diagnosing and managing stable acute and chronic conditions.
- Recognizing and referring patients requiring urgent, emergent or specialized care.
- Partnering with patients and families to support informed healthcare decisions.

Where You'll Practice

- Primary care
- Internal medicine
- Medically underserved and rural practice
- Specialized clinical services (gastroenterology, oncology, cardiology, neurology, dermatology)
- Skilled/long-term care settings
- Veteran health

> "This program has given me opportunities to learn about the different sectors of nursing, something I wouldn't be able to do alone because no one in my family has a health care background. I'm a first-generation college grad, so navigating academia has been a little challenging in various ways. The faculty has helped me to spread my wings in a safe space while giving me guidance when I need it."
