The UW School of Nursing is proud to present the 2016 Elizabeth Sterling Soule Endowed Lecture.

The Soule Lecture will feature a keynote address by Dr. Risa Lavizzo-Mourey, president and CEO of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. She will discuss the Importance of Joining Forces to Build a Culture of Health.

Risa Lavizzo-Mourey, M.D., M.B.A., is a specialist in geriatrics with more than 30 years of experience as a medical practitioner, policymaker, professor and nonprofit executive. As president and CEO of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation since 2003, she has led transformative programs to tackle the nation’s most pressing health issues.

ABOUT THE SOULE LECTURE

Established in 1979, the Elizabeth Sterling Soule Endowed Lecture honors the founding dean of the University of Washington School of Nursing. Soule was called the mother of nursing in the Pacific Northwest by TIME magazine, and was a driving force behind the transition in nursing education from apprenticeship programs in area hospitals to formal training programs. She created what would become the national standard for nursing education.

The annual Soule lecture features prominent nursing and health care leaders and is supported through the Elizabeth Sterling Soule Endowed Fund.
